From Marshal M. Rosenthal the proprietary audio format of Microsoft WAV is widely used because it is common all over the world of the PC and will play on almost any media player. So, if you want to be compatible with PCs and Macs, it is easier to have all the converted audio formats (such as MP3 and AIFF) in WAV. Go to the "Applications" folder and double-click the "QuickTime 7" Pro icon. Go to QuickTime File menu at the top of the screen and select "Open File" from the drop-down menu. Select the audio file and click "Open" to upload to the file. This will bring a small QuickTime horizontal window with the name of the song at the top. Select the "File" menu at the top of the screen and then select "Export" from the window that appears. Select "Sound to Wave" from the drop-down menu. Click the "Save" button and save the WAV file on your hard drive. By Bill Richards | Jupiterimages/Photos.com/Getty Images Converting an image JPEG format to SWF is often convenient for web designers aiming at faster loading times on the web page. SWF is also a good alternative to PDF and does not need a separate client reader to install on a user machine that the document is displayed correctly. Using a suite of tools called SWF Tools, you can quickly convert JPEG images to SWF. Download and install Adobe Flash CS4. You can use the trial version of the software, or purchase it. Open Flash and create a new "Flash File (ActionScript 3.0)." Go to the "File" drop-down menu and select "Import > Import to Stage..." Select the JPEG image and click "Import". Click in the gray area outside the white box and under the heading "Properties" in the right column press the "Edit" button to change the size of the stadium to match the size of your JPEG image. (If your JPEG is 100px-by-120px, set the stage size to 100px-by-120px.) Move your image into the white box resized so that your image fills the white frame of the stage. Go to the "File" drop-down menu and select "Export > Export to image..." and save SWF file on hard drive. By Art Corvelay The Mac operating system differs in many aspects from Windows. Included in these differences are software programs that are compatible with each operating system. However, iTunes is a program that runs on both operating systems and allows users to convert audio files from WAV files to MP3 files. You may want to convert a WAV file because these audio files are typically larger than MP3 files. Therefore, if you want to save memory on your hard drive, this conversion can be necessary. Open the iTunes program. Each Mac has this software. However, if you have deleted the program, you can download it from Apple's website. Edit the encoding settings in iTunes. Click "iTunes" Preferences." Then choose "Input Settings". Finally, choose "Mp3 Encoder" from the drop-down menu and click the "Ok" button to continue. Import the WAV file or the files you want to convert. You can simply simplyfiles from folders where they reside in the iTunes program. Select one or more files you want to convert. Click the file to select it. You can hold the Shift button to select a set of files. Click the Advanced button and select "Create the Mp3 version". This will convert WAV files. Software packages are a great way to collect some new big apps at a huge discount, and MacBundler's latest offer is no exception. It offers a number of useful and fun multimedia applications, as well as some practical downloads for your notes, finances, automation and computer cleaning needs. Here is the whole list, how much they normally cost, and what each application can do: SnapFlow $(129) - Turn your videos into high-quality images. FX Photo Studio PRO $(40) - Adds various effects to pictures. Koku $(30) - A simple but flexible personal financial director. Sidekick $(29) - Automatically update your Mac settings according to its location. DVD Creator $(49) - Quickly burn your DVD videos with custom menus and more. Nottingham $(20) - An elegant notepad for your Mac. Mac DVD Ripper Pro $(20) - Rips DVD with one click. App Delete $(8) - Uninstall only about something and cleans the wasted space on your Mac. Elmedia Player Pro - A multifunctional multimedia player. The package offers all these applications for $39. Also, you can take a free copy of Vidconvert, a drag-and-drop video converter, enrolling for MacBundler upgrade agreements. This agreement is separated from the package, so you can get a free license without the need to buy anything. MacBundler $(39) OS X: If you want to share a photo with a friend, but it is in a large file format, it makes sense to convert it to a JPEG before sending it. If you do not want to take the time to open an image editor to convert it though, Make JPEG Droplet can do the job immediately. The droplet download actually contains three applications: JPEG 100, JPEG 80 and JPEG 60, with the numbers that refer to the quality of the JPEG they produce. Choose the ones you want, leave them on your Mac's Dock and you're done. Now, you can drag and drop tons of image file formats on the app icon, and will be copied and converted into a JPEG instantly in the same directory. The application can manage the TIFF, PSD, PDF, PNG, bitmap images, and more, so it is not likely to stump. Running could not be easier, and if this is something you do often, it can save a lot of time. Make JPEG Droplet (Free) | Simon Heys via One Thing Well On a Mac, you can only use the embedded tools to convert specifics or all pages of a PDF file to JPG. We will show you how to perform this conversion using Preview and integrated into the Mac. Convert a single PDF page to JPG To convert a single selection page from PDF to JPG, use Mac's built-in preview app. RELATED: Use your Mac preview app to crop, resize, rotate and edit images Start by opening the folder that has your PDF file in Finder. Right-click the PDF file and select SelectWith > Preview from the menu. In Preview, select the PDF page you want to turn into JPG. Then, from the menu bar, select File > Export. You will see the preview export window. At the top of this window, click the "Export as" field and type a name for the converted JPG file. Then, select a folder to save the file. At the bottom of the export window, click the "Format" drop-down menu and choose "JPEG." Drag the "Quality" slider to the left to lower the quality of the resulting file, or drag it to the right to increase the quality of the file. Optionally, click the "Resolution" field and enter a value. You probably do not need to change this, however. Then, at the bottom of the export window, click "Save" to save the file. Preview will convert your selected PDF page to JPG. You will find the resulting JPG file in the specified folder. And that's how you selectively turn a PDF page into JPG on your Mac! RELATED: How to easily print photos on your Mac Convert an entire PDF file to JPG If you have a PDF with different pages, the Preview method listed above is not ideal. Instead, use a Quick Action Automator that will convert all pages from your PDF to JPG at once. This method can process multiple PDF files in just one go, too. To do this quick action first, open Automator on your Mac. Do this by pressing Command+Spacebar, typing "Automator" in Spotlight search, and selecting it in search results. In Automator, select File > New from the menu bar. In the "Choose a type for your document" prompt, select "Quick Action". Then, at the bottom, click "Choose". Now you're on the Quick Action editing screen. Here, at the top, click the drop-down menu "The workflow gets current" and choose "PDF file." In the upper left corner of Automator, click "Actions". Then, click the text field next to "Variables" and type "Remember PDF pages like pictures." From the search results, drag "Receive PDF pages as images" and leave it on the workflow to the right. In the "Receive PDF pages as images" section on the right, click the "Format" drop-down menu and choose "JPEG Image". Optionally, click "Resolution" to specify a custom resolution for the image and click "Comprehension" to select a compression level for the files. Click the search box next to "Variables" again. This time, type "Move Finder Items." Then, from the search results, drag "Move Finder Items" and release it under the "Remember PDF pages as images" section on the workflow to the right. In the "Move Finder Items" section on the right, click the "To" drop-down menu and select a folder to save converted JPG files. Your actionShe's ready. To save it, from the Automator menu bar, select File > Save. Alternatively, press the command+ S keyboard shortcut. You'll see a rescue message in Automator. Here, type a name for your quick action and click "Save". This nameappear when using this action, then use something descriptive. We will go with "PDF to JPG". Now that your quick action is saved, close Automator by clicking Automator > Stop Automator in the menu bar. To use your new created Quick Action to convert a PDF to JPG, first, open the folder that has your PDF file or file. Use the mouse or trackpad to select the PDF files to convert to JPG. Then right-click any PDF file and select Quick Actions > PDF on JPG. If you used another name for your quick action, select that instead of "PDF to JPG". Automator will immediately begin to convert selected PDF files pages to JPG. When the files are converted, you will find them in the specified folder. And this is how to batch convert PDF to JPG on a Mac. Happy conversion! Did you know that you can virtually convert any image or document on your Mac to PDF? You don't even need a third party tool to do it! RELATED: How to create a PDF file on a Mac
